

Hiring A Wedding Co-ordinator

What You Should Consider

- Many couples are now so busy working that planning their wedding requires the services of a professional Wedding Coordinator. It may be a pre-conceived idea that to hire a Wedding Consultant will cost a fortune. Not true! In fact many Wedding Coordinators can not only save you money, but also save you time.
- A Wedding Coordinator works closely with you to help your dream become a reality. They can use their experience and creativity to enhance your own ideas, or to give you alternative ones. It's not surprising that many couples find it increasingly difficult to cope with the arrangements and events leading up to their wedding. Planning a wedding has been claimed to be as stressful as moving house. It may be that you don't have the time to arrange your wedding, or you want someone else to take the stress and strain, so you are free to enjoy the lead up to your special day.
- A coordinator will take care of as little or as much as you wish and will tailor their services to meet your needs. They possess the knowledge and expertise to support you from the planning, through to the day itself.
- A coordinator can oversee your entire wedding, leaving you with nothing to do but enjoy yourselves. They can coordinate the planning, the timing, the catering, the transport - every little detail, right down to the place-cards and decorations.
- Once you have agreed upon your style or theme, your wedding coordinator will get to work organising suppliers and ideas for your approval. They can prepare, post and keep track of invitation replies as well as keep a close eye on all arrangements and bookings. While you choose your dress and colours or visit florists, your coordinator can be finding the best photographer or reception venue.